Dear Friends,

Rabbi arrested in Haifa for performing non-Orthodox wedding! Western Wall agreement falls apart!

The year in headlines emphasizes the enduring value, continuing need for and essential role of The Schechter Institutes in Jewish life and in Israeli society. Our vision is to make Schechter the “address for pluralistic Jewish life in Israel.” The results are clear. Each year, tens of thousands of children and adults, secular and religious (of all denominations or streams), are connecting to Judaism through our programs. And each year the numbers are growing!

The Schechter Institute for Jewish Studies continues to conduct the largest M.A. program in Jewish Studies in the country. Over the last few years, it has expanded from primarily training teachers to attracting a wider audience of Jewish professionals and lay leadership. The emphasis has moved from a strictly academic environment to one that is more “practical” or applied Jewish Studies. In addition, we now are offering more non-degree programs to help satisfy the thirst for adult education in both Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

This year, we also established an annual conference series together with the Jewish Theological Seminary about Israel-Diaspora relations. With hundreds of participants, the conference overflowed, with people standing in the halls and becoming as engaged as the speakers. Controversial positions? Yes. Dialogue? Yes. Thought provoking? Yes. We will continue with our second conference in spring 2019, seeking to forge the basis for a renewed Israel-Diaspora partnership that recognizes each other’s needs.

The Schechter Rabbinical Seminary also continues to grow. Enrollment is up and we inaugurated the new Ashira program promoting Jewish renewal through music, to glowing reviews. Based on feedback thus far, SRS is working on the development of an app for Synagogue Music to aid both musicians as well as ba’alei tefilla (prayer leaders) throughout the world. It will emphasize the many diverse strains of Jewish music found in our tradition.

TALI, our educational arm for school children, also made significant progress this past year. Working with the Ministry of Education, TALI entered into a common initiative fostering Jewish studies in the schools across Israel. Furthermore, we continue to innovate and grow our offerings for high school students with the addition of TALI’s new 10th grade program. Outside of Israel, TALI is working with the Ministry of Diaspora Affairs to train teachers at Jewish day schools throughout South America. Year-long online courses will be given, with study in Israel during summer breaks.

Midreshet Schechter provides adult education throughout Israel and at our Neve Schechter campus in Tel Aviv. In the next year, we expect to break ground on an expanded facility to provide more classroom/programming space as well as a TALI pre-school. The head of our Israel Adult education programs, Rabbi Dubi Haiyun, practices what he preaches; he was recently arrested in Haifa for performing a non-Orthodox wedding.

In Ukraine, our schools and congregations continue to grow in size and we are thrilled to slake the continuing thirst for Jewish knowledge and connection.

We continue our successful efforts to promote Jewish pluralism in Israel through our many programs, and trust that next year’s headlines will be more positive.

Saul I. Sanders
Chairman of the Board
The Schechter Institutes, Inc.
This past year was not a good year for religious pluralism in Israel. The low point was reached when Schechter Rabbinical Seminary graduate Rabbi Dubi Haiyun of Kehillat Moriah in Haifa was detained for questioning by the Haifa police for the “crime” of performing the wedding of a couple which the Haifa Chief Rabbinate did not wish to perform.

Nonetheless, I am quite optimistic about the future of religious pluralism in Israel. First of all, if the Rabbinate in Haifa asked the police to question Rabbi Haiyun, it means that they are scared of the competition. Indeed, 20-25% of young couples now get married outside the Chief Rabbinate. Furthermore, all surveys done during the last ten years show that approximately 50% of secular Israelis want to learn more about Judaism. They want to know what the secular public school system in Israel neglected to teach them. They want to learn about Jewish history, culture and tradition, or – to use the rabbinic phrase (Avot 3:1) – “to know whence we came and where we are going”.

Indeed, Rabbi Haiyun’s other job epitomizes this thirst for Jewish knowledge. He runs our Midreshet Schechter network of 27 adult education courses for 700 adults throughout the country every week.

Similarly, the Schechter Institute continues to run one of the leading M.A. programs in Jewish Studies in the State of Israel, including the new Bible track, Judaism and the Arts, Marpeh – which includes a CPE certificate – and the Maccabee track for JCC workers.

The Schechter Rabbinical Seminary is also thriving. In addition to the Ordination, Mishlei and JTS programs, the SRS runs the Torah Lishma (Torah for its own sake) program, the new Ashira program to train Jewish music leaders for Israel, and the Derakhim Facebook project to promote religious pluralism in the State of Israel.

The TALI Education Fund now provides Jewish education to 50,000 children every year. In addition to 318 elementary and pre-schools, new programs include the TALI 10th grade project in Jewish Thought and four new textbooks for grades 3-6 being used by approximately 70 non-TALI schools throughout the country.

Neve Schechter in Tel Aviv continues to run the very successful Jewish Art Gallery, the “70 Voices music project”, and the Bar/Bat Mitzvah project (83 this past year!) – serving 17,000 people every year. This year, we will open a second Torah Lishma program at Neve Schechter in conjunction with the SRS.

I would like to conclude with a parable about the wicked King Ahaz found in Ruth Rabbah (ed. Vilna fol. 2b): “…If there are no kids, there are no goats; if there are no goats, there is no flock; if there is no flock, there is no shepherd!” So reasoned Ahaz: “If there are no children [studying Torah], there are no adults; if there are no adults, there are no disciples; if there are no disciples, there are no Sages; if there are no Sages there are no synagogues and Batei Midrash; and if there are no synagogues and Batei Midrash then God, as it were, cannot make His Shekhinah (Spirit) rest upon the world. I will therefore [close] the synagogues and Batei Midrash.”

For 70 years, most Israelis have been cut off from synagogues and Batei Midrash. Thanks to the Schechter Institutes, over 70,000 Israeli children and adults now study, experience and appreciate Judaism every year.

With your help, we shall continue to expand this Jewish Education Revolution which we began in 1984.
SCHECHTER #1 IN ISRAEL
Behind Every Face is a Jewish Story

The Schechter Institutes is the address for pluralistic Jewish Studies in Israel. For over 35 years, Israelis have turned to Schechter for Jewish knowledge and culture, identity-building and a positive and inclusive Jewish experience for themselves and their children. That is why today, the Schechter Institute of Jewish Studies offers Israel’s largest M.A. program in Jewish studies. That is why the TALI Education Fund leads the way in providing pluralistic Jewish studies to over 50,000 Israeli school children and their families.

It is rewarding to be #1. The Schechter Institutes is grateful for the overwhelming vote of confidence that Israelis throughout the country continue to bestow upon our programs. But numbers never provide the entire picture. Behind every number there is a face, and behind that face, there is a Jewish story. This year’s Annual Report allows you to get behind the numbers and into the hearts of people whose lives Schechter has changed.

Schechter Rabbinical Seminary, Schechter Institute of Jewish Studies, TALI Education Fund, Neve Schechter, Midreshet Schechter and Midreshet Yerushalayim. Writing new Jewish stories every day – in Israel and overseas.
Choosing Life

Miriam Peretz, 2018 Israel Prize Recipient, TALI Principal for over 20 years

Elyasaf Peretz, Social Activist, M.A. Student in the Maccabee Leadership Program

Elyasaf Peretz radiates a pure positive energy. His words are spoken passionately and at a clip, as if to remind us all that life is short. In 1998, his brother Uriel Peretz, the eldest of six siblings, was killed in action in Lebanon. Twelve years later, a second brother, Eliraz, fell in battle in the Gaza strip. For Elyasaf, and his mother, Miriam, peering through the veil of devastation and despair, only one option presented itself: choosing life.

Miriam not only chose life, she has dedicated every waking moment to the Jewish State and its people, lecturing around the country, especially to the young, as they approach army age. For the many thousands of bereaved families, she has emerged as a symbol of courage and compassion as she expresses so eloquently the hopes and fears of her fellow citizens.

For over twenty years, Miriam served as beloved principal of the TALI Givat Zeev school; she is also a graduate of the TALI Educational Leadership Program at Schechter. She credits the educational spirit of TALI and Schechter for much of her personal growth and development. “I feel blessed to have had the privilege to learn in this special ‘Bet Midrash’ known as the Schechter Institute. It’s been a home that has opened my heart to love the wisdom of Torah and the people of Israel in all their shades of difference.”

This year, she received the Israel Prize for Lifetime Achievement and Special Contribution to Society and the State and was given the honor to speak on behalf of the sixteen Israel Prize Laureates.

“My mother has been my beacon of light,” explains Elyasaf. Following in Miriam’s footsteps, Elyasaf is studying for an M.A. degree in Schechter’s Maccabee program for Community Leadership. The program is a perfect fit for this 31-year old father of two who in less than a decade has established a number of non-profits, including two pre-army leadership academies, an organization for bereaved siblings and most recently, “Masa 70” - a seven-week hike honoring Israel’s 70th anniversary, where more than 40,000 participants traversed the land from Tel Chai to Eilat.

“Schechter has been a home that has opened my heart to love the wisdom of Torah and the people of Israel in all their shades of difference.”
Nava Berenshtein and Yerach Meiersdorf had gone out only once before, but as fate would have it, out of 40 students at the Schechter Rabbinical Seminary, they were paired as a chavruta (Talmud study in groups of two). The rest is history. The couple were married 18 months later in Jerusalem, surrounded by large families and a huge crowd of Schechter colleagues and friends.

There is a twist to the story: the young newlyweds both come from solidly Orthodox homes.

Nava, 28, grew up in Petach Tikvah in what she describes as an “Ultra-Orthodox Zionist home.”

After completing national service, Nava traveled to UCLA where she studied directing, and to Kehillat Ma’arav in Santa Monica where she taught Jewish studies. She was embraced by Rabbi Michael Gotlieb and his community. “I was exposed to a Judaism that accepted everyone and where everyone was treated equally,” she explains. She then returned to Israel and enrolled at Schechter.

Yerach, 33, seemed destined to follow a conventional Orthodox path, albeit with some doubts, until one day he happened upon his sister’s notes from a “Streams in Judaism” class she was taking in the Schechter M.A. program. This discovery would change his life forever. He began reading up on Conservative Judaism. “I googled Conservative synagogues and started going every Shabbat without telling anyone,” he remembers.

Five years ago, Yerach enrolled in the SRS Mishlei program which offers M.A. studies in a Bet Midrash environment and serves as a feeder into the ordination program. He interned at Omer’s Kehillat Magen Avraham near Beersheva, and two years later, he decided on rabbinical school.

Seeing Nava and Yerach in their cottage in the pastoral Jerusalem neighborhood of Ein Kerem, you sense their strength of purpose, their passion, and yes, their love for each other and the Jewish people. Yerach works full time as Rabbi for the NOAM youth movement. Nava has begun her rabbinic studies. Their immediate dream? To create a pluralistic community of prayer and learning right in the middle of their living room. Not far-fetched, considering the roads already traveled in reaching this moment in their lives.

“I was exposed to a Judaism that accepted everyone and where everyone was treated equally…”

Nava B. Meiersdorf
In the fast-growing town of Yokneam, perched on the edge of the verdant Jezreel Valley in Israel’s north, the idea of establishing a TALI Junior High School program was a no brainer: all the city’s secular elementary schools are TALI schools! “TALI entered the picture just at the moment we were defining our identity as a school and the idea of introducing pluralistic Jewish studies was important to us,” explains Aviva Sabag, principal of the New Yokneam TALI Junior High School, and a veteran educator of 25 years with a B.A. and M.A. in Special Education.

Last fall, the school joined TALI, introducing two hours of enriched Jewish studies a week for all 640 students of its 7th and 8th grades. “TALI is much more than just another curriculum, it’s a total experience that is effecting the entire school culture,” says Aviva. To that end, she asked TALI to offer the Haleli Leadership program to her staff onsite at the school. Today, 17 teachers devote five hours a week, after regular school hours, to enriching their Jewish knowledge.

“Judaism by definition is all-encompassing, a way of life,” explains Osnat Eldar, TALI pedagogic supervisor in charge of curriculum development and the Haleli program at the school. “My job is to show the teachers that Jewish culture is not only there to enrich us, it can be an essential educational tool.”

Leah Ben Hamu, the school’s TALI coordinator, is a guiding force in the successful implementation of the program. Though soft-spoken and unassuming, she is a serious player, passionately committed to making her school a model for integrated Jewish studies at the Junior High level. She knows that getting it right at the beginning is crucial. “You have to immerse your entire self into the project. In essence, we are building a totally new discipline. I feel like it’s a sacred calling,” she says.

“TALI was introduced at the ground level and not imposed from above. Our teachers are actually teaching the sources, creating an organic community of learners at all levels,” sums up Aviva.

“TALI is much more than just another curriculum, it’s a total experience that is effecting the entire school culture.”

A warm spring day at the Neve Schechter gallery. A well-known artist appears, enquiring about exhibiting in the space. An hour later, a large group arrives to view the gallery’s current exhibit as part of the Open University’s series, “Walking Art.” Although unconnected events, both point to the prominent place the art gallery has achieved within the Tel Aviv art scene.

In no small measure, the credit goes to Shira Friedman, the Gallery’s founding curator. “I define my professional work as ‘Jewish curating.’ The foundation of the exhibit is based on Jewish thought, texts or philosophy. I then find contemporary art that shares some of those ideas to create the core of the exhibit,” explains Shira. “My commentary can juxtapose Rabban Gamliel (1st century rabbinic authority) with Simone de Beauvoir – allowing the viewer a different take on the experience.”

“It is difficult for the predominantly secular art world to admit that there can be a strong connection between contemporary Israeli art and Judaism,” says Shira. Early on, some artists refused to exhibit in a building shared with the Neve Schechter synagogue. But today, as an integral part of Neve Schechter, the gallery elicits growing interest among Tel Aviv artists, over 100 of whom have exhibited their art here.

With an M.A. in Jewish Art from JTS and a Curator’s Diploma from the Technion, Shira brings her passion, knowledge and keen sense of aesthetics to Neve Schechter. Working around the Jewish calendar, Shira has ambitiously mounted five exhibits this year, and around thirty since the gallery was established.

2018 marked a milestone for the gallery. Two prominent Israeli artists - Ayelet Carmi and Meirav Heiman - enquired about exhibiting at Neve Schechter. Commissioning original pieces, Shira worked with the artists for over a year, completing a creative process that also enriched their Jewish knowledge. What emerged was a provocative exhibit which connected the fact that women are frequently excluded from singing at public events in Israel with the counting of the Omer. For the 3rd year in a row, the gallery received funding from Israel’s Ministry of Culture, reflecting official recognition from the State.

“If I enable the viewer to look at Israeliiness, Judaism and contemporary art in a new and critical way, then I am succeeding,” sums up Shira.

“I define my professional work as ‘Jewish curating.’ The foundation of the exhibit is based on Jewish thought, texts or philosophy. I then find contemporary art that shares some of those ideas to create the core of the exhibit...”
Building a Circle of Jewish Life

Alise Naomi Vork, Volunteer at Kehillat Masoret, Kiev; Veteran Counselor, Camp Ramah-Ukraine; Graduate, Long-distance Torah Reading Class Sponsored by Schechter

Alise Vork takes her Judaism very seriously. From early on, being Jewish and living a full Jewish life was central to her identity. Growing up in Chernowitz, Ukraine, she attended the TALI Jewish Day School from 1st grade through high school, and from age 10, has spent 18 summers first as a camper and then as a counselor at Camp Ramah-Ukraine. “TALI and Camp Ramah created my Circle of Jewish Life. It felt so good to be within that circle. I could not picture my life differently,” explains Alise.

Out of the circle grew strong bonds of friendship and a sense of a community working together. Although her grandmother had told Alise that she was Jewish, there were no documents to prove this status. At 16, with the support of Midreshet Yeruhalayim director Gila Katz, Alise began to study for conversion. In the summer of 2009, she joined the first group of Masorti converts in Ukraine, taking Naomi as her Jewish name.

After she married Vladimir Vork three years ago in Chernowitz, the couple decided to move to Kiev. “Kiev is the center of Jewish life in in Ukraine,” explains Alise. The Jewish circle has embraced her at Kehillat Masoret, led by Schechter graduate Rabbi Reuven Stamov. Alise remembers Rabbi Reuven, her counselor at Camp Ramah-Ukraine, as being “an important role model in my life.” Today, she and her husband regularly attend Shabbat services and holiday events, volunteering their services wherever needed.

Most recently, Alise completed a year-long Torah reading course offered to Midreshet Yerushalayim activists via the web from Jerusalem, taught by Schechter teacher, Saralee Shrell-Fox. Alisa read from the Torah for the first time publicly at Camp shabbat services this past summer. “What better way for me to give back something Jewishly meaningful to a place that has given me so much Jewish knowledge!” beams Alise.

“Kiev is the center of Jewish life in Ukraine. Just as Judaism encircled me as a child, so I wanted to enter that same circle as an adult.”
The Graduate School

Chair, Board of Trustees: Saul Sanders
Chair, Executive Committee: Jonathan Steinberg
President: Professor Doron Bar
Executive Vice President: Eitan Cooper
Dean: Dr. Ari Ackerman

Academic News

Appointments
Dr. Ari Ackerman is the first incumbent of the Golinkin Chair in TALI Jewish Education. Ackerman, an expert in the philosophy of education, served as Dean of the Graduate School for the last three years. In his new capacity, he will teach TALI educators and organize conferences on pluralistic Jewish education.

Dr. Tamar Kadari is the new Dean of the Graduate School. Kadari, a Kekst Faculty Fellow and senior lecturer, has been the head of the Midrash and Aggadah program for many years. Her research interests include biblical women, aesthetics and beauty in rabbinic literature and literary readings of midrash.

Dr. Noa Yuval Chacham was appointed Lecturer in Land of Israel Studies. She also coordinates the Judaism and the Arts and Land of Israel M.A. Programs.

Graduation Ceremony | 63 Schechter M.A. degrees were conferred on May 29, 2018, including the first 10 graduates of the Maccabee Community Leadership program. Keynote speaker was Miriam Peretz, 2018 Israel Prize recipient, TALI principal and TALI Leadership and Schechter M.A. graduate. (See profile, page 5.)

New Academic Initiatives

“Bible Revival” at Schechter
An initiative to return the study of Bible to its place of prominence is underway at Schechter. The revised Schechter M.A. program which opened in Fall 2018, hopes to reverse the trend of declining enrolment by offering a dynamic interdisciplinary curriculum. Over the summer, effective marketing of the program to TALI educators, Bible teachers and others interested in deepening their knowledge of the subject took place alongside an impressive 6-part Bible study series of lectures and guided tours which showcased some of Israel’s leading literary and academic figures. In addition, a series of 5-minute video interviews on “The Bible Now” were produced featuring media personality Dov Elboim in dialogue with leading Schechter faculty.

“Informed Creations” Takes Judaism and the Arts to New Level | “Informed Creations” (Ma’aseh Hoshev) is Schechter’s newest study program offered in conjunction with Jerusalem’s HaCubia Art School. Last year, ten students enrolled in this unique Jewish Art program that combines theory and practice. In April, Schechter, HaCubia and Bar Ilan University hosted a well-attended symposium at Schechter on “The Secret of Creation: the Teachings of Rebbe Nachman of Breslav and Jewish Art.”

Numbers 2017-18

- 402 students, including 80 first-year M.A. students
- 74 faculty members, 17 full-time, 57 part-time
- 10 interdisciplinary M.A. tracks of Jewish Studies
- 65 graduates in 2018; 1683 graduates since 1992
- 4 books published
- 13 conferences/study events, 1200 participants
- 6 special lectures on the Bible, over 600 participants
Research Think Tank on Zion and the Diaspora Established at Schechter | A joint interdisciplinary research project: Zion and the Diaspora in the Past, Present and Future, headed by Schechter’s Prof. Yossi Turner and comprised of top-level scholars and intellectuals from Israel and the Diaspora, met 8 times this past year. An initial reading of the discourse tentatively shows that Jewish life in Israel has an advantage over Jewish life in the Diaspora with regard to insuring the continuity of the Jewish people. But that, without the contribution of Diaspora Jewry, the Jewish future will lack many of the ethical and existential emphases that characterized past Jewish life. An international conference to share the group’s findings is scheduled for 2019, with a book based on the Conference proceedings to follow.

Maccabee (acronym for Community Leadership in the Jewish Spirit), is today one of Schechter’s most popular study tracks. Attracting 27 community center and non-profit professionals from around the country, this unique program combines Jewish studies with practical tools for building strong community-based professional leadership.

Marpeh Spiritual Care Program Offers Supervisory Specialization | Marpeh, with 24 spiritual care students in different stages of their training and a long waiting list, is the only academic chaplaincy (CPE) program in Israel. A new supervisory track curriculum, funded by UJA-Federation of New York and advised by top experts from the Association of Clinical Pastoral Education in the U.S., has attracted four outstanding students - all veteran certified chaplains. Dr. Einat Ramon, founding director of Marpeh, has published Truth and Loving Kindness: A Sourcebook for Chaplains in Hebrew (2nd edition) and in English.

University of Amsterdam Holds Winter School at Schechter | A week of Jewish Studies, including field trips, for 12 students from the University of Amsterdam took place at Schechter in mid-January 2018. The course, Schisms and Conflicts in Judaism, was co-hosted by Schechter and the Open University and organized by Dr. Paul Mandel. Faculty from both institutions lectured to the students.

28th and 29th Ordinations - 6 New Rabbis!

In December 2017, Yerachmiel (Yerach) Meiersdorf (see profile page 6) and Sara Cohen were ordained. Yerach holds the national position of NOAM Rabbi and Sara is the community rabbi of Kibbutz Ketura. On November 29, 2018, four new rabbis will be ordained in the Schechter Bet Midrash. Yarden Raber is serving Ramat Aviv’s Tiferet Shalom Congregation in north Tel Aviv; Irina Gritsevskaya is assistant rabbi at the New Ramat Aviv Kehillah and works with Russian-speaking Israelis as well; Raanan Mallek is the new rabbi of Kehillat Darchei Noam in Pardes Hannah and Idit Mevorach serves as the liaison for all JTS students in Israel.

New Spiritual Mentor

Rabbi Dr. Mimi Feigelson joined SRS in September 2017 as Spiritual Mentor and Lecturer in Rabbinics and Hassidic Thought. Mimi served as Spiritual Mentor of the Ziegler Rabbinical School in Los Angeles for 16 years. We welcome the enthusiasm she brings to Schechter.

New Initiatives 2017-18

Ashira: Music as a Jewish Experience

In Fall 2018, SRS launched the first cohort of Ashira students. Ashira was developed by an outstanding group of music educators, performers and leaders of Jewish renewal in Israel. Its goal is to bring composers, musicians, song leaders and shlichei tzibbur into a learning process that will enhance Jewish musical creativity throughout Israel. The program offers an intensive weekly program in liturgical music, the study of the structure and meaning of prayer, and guidance in musical performance and creation. A planning team of 12 world class prayer and music leaders developed the Ashira curriculum.

Torah Lishma For the Public

Established two years ago to provide the community with a Bet Midrash non-academic framework of learning, Torah Lishma has blossomed into an inspirational and meaningful program of Jewish study. The program draws an eclectic group of lay activists and Jewish educators, young adults and retirees, religious and secular. Program to expand: Due to the program’s success in Jerusalem, a new track opened in Tel Aviv’s Neve Schechter in Fall 2018.

Mishlei Community Outreach and Renewal
Mishlei combines Jewish studies with leadership training. The two-year M.A. program stresses the strong connection between Jewish academic studies, Jewish renewal and communal service. Its diverse student body reflects a microcosm of Israeli society, with many Mishlei graduates engaged in educational leadership roles. Since Mishlei started seven years ago, ten graduates have continued for rabbinic studies, with several receiving ordination.

Derakhim (Ways) New Media Project
The Derakhim New Media Project for Pluralism and Tolerance, in memory of Rabbi Marc and Dr. Henia z”l Liebhaber, established a solid online presence in 2018, producing more than 25 short videos of Israeli leaders, which reached over 90,000 people on Facebook. Disseminating the Jewish value of pluralism, the project aims to show that there is more than one way to be Jewish.

New NOAM-Schechter Partnership
“7 Days of the Week (to Shabbat)” was launched this year for NOAM graduates participating in a “gap-year” of national service before entering the army. The group of 35 young leaders spent one day a month engaged in high level studies at the Bet Midrash. Conceived and supervised by Dean Rabbi Avi Novis-Deutsch, NOAM director Yair Zafrany and NOAM Rabbi, Schechter graduate Rabbi Yerach Meiersdorf (see profile, p. 6), the year-long project strengthened the students’ connection to Torah and their dialogue with Jewish sources.

“Betzvata - Altogether” for Special Needs
“Betzvata” is a first-of-its-kind Bet Midrash study program for adults with cognitive disabilities. More than doubling 2018 projections, eight study groups with over 100 participants met in centers from Nahariya to Eilat. A joint project of SRS and the Adraba Masorti Center, the 10-session curriculum is supervised by an SRS student, and 4 groups are taught by SRS students and graduates. The program provides expertise in working with this important underserved community, while giving participants a rich values-based learning experience.

ZOOMing in for the Holidays
SRS offered a new series of Holiday Webinars for rabbis worldwide. Taught by Rabbis Avi-Novis-Deutsch, David Golinkin and Mimi Feigelson, the learning in Hebrew (8 sessions to date) have reached dozens of rabbis in the U.S., Israel, the U.K., Argentina and Brazil.

Rabbinic Intern Program: Strengthening Students and Kehillot
SRS has increased the level of partnership with the Masorti Movement, reflecting the belief that the training of outstanding spiritual leaders must include practical experience in Masorti communities. Today, SRS students are interning in 13 Kehillot around Israel, learning invaluable skills while giving back to the community.

The Importance of Inter-Faith Programming
SRS continues to value and develop its interfaith programs with the Netherlands Israel Study Institute. In January, a group of Dutch Protestant pastors spent a morning in study with SRS students. SRS is a member of the Inter-Religious Coordinating Council in Israel (ICCI).
TALI Education Fund
Chair, Board of Trustees: Col (ret.) Roni Yannay
Susan and Scott Shay Director General: Rabbi Dr. Eitan Chikli

TALI is Israel’s largest pluralistic in-school Jewish Studies program. Reaching more than 50,000 children and 3,000 educators in 318 public schools and preschools throughout the country, TALI’s myriad of programs and curricula make the beauty of Judaism accessible to growing numbers of diverse Israeli communities.

Growing Ties with Ministry of Education and Municipalities
Israel’s Ministry of Education significantly increased its funding of TALI programs in 2017-18. The TALI Education Fund (TEF) was charged with professional development programs, preparing curricula and developing textbooks for secular schools throughout Israel. TEF also works closely with municipalities and the Ministry of Education.

As a result, all elementary schools in towns like Yokne’am and Ma’ale Adumim study according to TALI curriculum.

Numbers 2017-18
- 318 TALI frameworks serving 50,000 pupils: 103 schools, including 5 new elementary schools, two middle schools, five high schools and 215 pre-schools
- 15 pedagogic counselors provided guidance to over 3,000 teachers in 103 TALI schools and additional schools Israel-wide
- 58 participants took part in three Haleli tracks in Modi’in, Yokne’am and in additional locations in northern Israel
- 16 TALI school rabbis/spiritual educators worked in TALI schools, providing 350 programming hours
- 2 TALI Leadership Program graduates received Schechter M.A. degrees; total program graduates: 283
- 20 professional development days focused on interdisciplinary studies, with 50 schools participating
- 2 TALI Leadership Program graduates received Schechter M.A. degrees; total program graduates: 283
- 200% increase in experiential education workshops: from 34 last year to 94 in 2017-18
- 5 “Shirat Halev” music festivals for choirs, dance and orchestra reached 1,250 students from 35 schools
- 25,000 Jewish-Israeli identity textbooks sold

Middle and High School Initiatives
10th Grade Jewish Identity Seminar Leads to Full Year National Program
Two successful two-day experiential seminars designed to engage Israeli 10th graders with their Israeli/Jewish identity were offered to 80 high school students from the northern Negev town of Ofakim. Based on the success of these pilots, a full-year curriculum has been launched nationwide with 1,100 students taking part. The program, comprised of weekly two-hour sessions and an end-of-year three-day experiential seminar will allow students to explore, many for the first time, the major existential questions that will accompany them into adulthood, framed in the Jewish/Israeli experience.

New TALI Junior High Opens in Yokne’am
A new junior high school in Yokne’am opened its doors last year to receive children from all the town’s elementary schools - all of which are TALI schools! Providing pluralistic Jewish education at the highest level is the school’s goal. To that end, most of its teachers are enrolled in the Haleli program for Jewish leadership. (see profile, page 7).
Professional Development Initiatives

Dr. Peri Sinclair was hired as Director of Professional Development in 2017. With a doctorate in Midrash and an M.A. in Jewish Education from JTS, Dr. Sinclair has already had a significant impact on the quality of the programs. Initiatives include a new and rigorous 30-hour professional development course which took place in 11 teachers’ rooms with the focus on creating a shared language around Israeli-Jewish identity. Additional development seminars offered teachers innovative programs which combined Judaism with science and the arts; courses on spiritual education and creating school initiatives. 50 schools participated.

Haleli Program for TALI Educators Grows Significantly

Haleli, the TALI Professional Development course launched two years ago as a pilot for 11 principals has grown to 116 educators in six locations in 2018-19. This impressive expansion includes a high school teachers’ group at the Israeli Naval Academy; four high school groups from the Branco Weiss School Network serving at-risk youth in the north; school heads in Ramat Yishai; a new high school in Yokne’am and Modi’in TALI coordinators/lead teachers.

In 2017-18, 58 participants met in Modi’in, the new Yokne’am TALI Junior High School and a northern Israel group. Their syllabus included the Jewish Bookshelf, Dilemmas in the Integration of Jewish Studies in the Public School System, Tradition and Innovation, and more.

The veteran northern Israel group traveled to New York for an exchange program with North American colleagues.

Textbook/Curriculum Initiatives

TALI Completes Textbook Series for Ministry of Education

At the request of Israel’s Ministry of Education, TALI wrote four new textbooks to teach the “Jewish Israeli Culture” discipline in Israel’s secular public schools. Completed this year, the comprehensive series for grades 3-6, called Sheli Ve’Shelechem (Mine and Yours), embraces pluralistic Judaism. Each textbook has an accompanying website and has been marketed widely to schools throughout Israel.

From Identity Card to Identity Consciousness, the 10th grade curriculum on Jewish/Israeli identity forms the backbone of the year-long course currently being introduced nationwide in Israel.

Judaism and the Environment Learning Center for grades 1-6, is nearing completion and will soon be available to all schools. The kit, which offers 7-8 learning stations for each of three age groups, utilizes methods that encourage independent and experiential learning.

TALI Curricula for South America

on Jewish holidays are nearing completion. Translated into Spanish and Portuguese, these important materials are distributed in 30 Jewish Day Schools in Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, Chile and Ecuador. A new partnership with Israel’s Ministry of Diaspora Affairs is expanding the program to include teacher training online and summer study visits to Israel.

DigiTALI Media

- The new TALI website launched in April 2018 with improved SEO and easier accessibility of online materials.
- The Levana and Visual Midrash sites were updated.
- TALI’s Facebook community grew by 25%, with increased activity, ads and posts. • A redesigned digital newsletter is produced bi-monthly. • Two instructional videos to accompany TALI textbooks were produced, as well as marketing videos for other TALI projects.
Neve Schechter
Legacy Heritage Center for Jewish Culture

Executive Director: Yonit Kolb-Reznitzki
Educational Advisor: Rabbi Roberto Arbib
Development Coordinator: Romina Reisin

Numbers 2017-18
17,000 people attended lectures, holiday events and exhibits during the year, with an average of 1,500 participants a month, including thousands of worshippers and guests who attended 83 Bar and Bat Mitzvah ceremonies in the Atid Sanctuary.

Neve Schechter: A Magnet for Jewish Renewal
Neve Schechter, located in Tel Aviv’s trendy Neve Zedek neighborhood, presents Israeli culture as an ongoing dialogue and point of engagement between contemporary life and Jewish sources. The center is recognized as a leading venue for Jewish culture and renewal in Tel Aviv and beyond.

The Masorti Kehillah of Neve Zedek
Neve Schechter houses the Masorti Congregation of Neve Zedek, led by Rabbi Roberto Arbib, which embraces families and individuals who seek an inclusive and spiritual community. In the heart of secular Tel Aviv, the Kehilla continues to expand its base of young families.

Midreshet Schechter & Midreshet Yerushalayim

Gila Katz, Pedagogic Supervisor, Midreshet Yerushalayim – Ukraine
Rabbi Reuven Stamov, Rabbinic Shaliah, Kiev
Rabbi Dubi Haiyun, Director, Midreshet Schechter - Israel

Midreshet Yerushalayim – Ukraine
Midreshet Yerushalayim, the only Conservative Jewish educational network in the former Soviet Union, sponsors Zionist-Jewish education in Ukraine. Over the last 27 years, the program has enabled thousands of Jews to reconnect to their heritage through experiential programs in schools, family centers and summer camps. All programs stress Jewish tradition, history, peoplehood and the centrality of Israel for the Jewish people.

Special Moments: Camps & Seminars 2018
Camp Ramah-Ukraine celebrated its 26th season of Jewish camping in August when 115 children coming from all over Ukraine immersed themselves in the joys of Jewish learning, spirituality and community.

- This year, of special note, local Midreshet Yerushalayim leaders – counselors at the camp – read for the first time from the Torah on Shabbat, serving as an important role model for all the campers. They had just graduated from a special year-long Torah cantillation course conducted by Schechter teacher Saralee Shrell-Fox via Skype.
- Five of the counselors were once campers themselves, reflecting the love and loyalty that Camp Ramah-Ukraine engenders in its children and staff.

- Mazal Tov! Two additional counselor couples became engaged to be married at the camp.

Ramah Family Camp was exceptionally successful this summer, drawing 80 participants (25 families) from Kiev, Kharkov, Odessa, Chernowitz, Berdichev and Belaya Tzerkov. Many families had to be turned away due to limited funds. Run by Kiev’s Kehillat Masoret rabbi, Reuven Stamov, and his wife, Lena, the camp acquaints families with the beauty of Judaism and Masorti Kehillot in Ukraine. After the camp, four new families joined the Kiev Kehillah.

The Annual Teachers’ Seminar, which took place near Uzhgorod, marked its 28th anniversary this year. 35 educators from across Ukraine learned in a unique atmosphere that fosters professional development and strengthens feelings of Jewish identity and peoplehood. Lectures relating to the “Jewish Mosaic” were taught by experienced Jewish educators, including Irena Gritsevskaya, a Schechter rabbinical student to be ordained in November 2018.

MY Community Outreach 2017-18
- Kiev’s Midreshet Yerushalayim/Masorti Olami Center for Jewish Education and Culture offers a multi-generational educational program for all family members in Hebrew, Jewish tradition, history, literature and Israeli culture. Today, under the able leadership of Schechter graduate Rabbi Reuven Stamov, the Center, together with the Masorti congregation, draws over 250 weekly participants to a plethora of courses and holiday workshops. Rabbi Stamov has become a leading religious figure in the city, invited to officiate at Jewish and non-Jewish events.

- Chernowitz Kehillat Aviv Cultural Center, led by Lev Kleiman, has built up an active community of more than 100 members in just a few years. In addition to high quality holiday workshops and weekly Shabbat programming, the center is nurturing young leaders with a vibrant NOAM youth group and a young leadership training program.

- Odessa Kehillat Tiferet, led by Zeev Waksman, was established two years ago. Today it boasts over 60 active members with creative Shabbat and holiday programming and a NOAM youth group of 20 teens.

- Other Family Centers are located in Berdichev, Kharkov and Uzhgorod.

- The Kharkov Lyceum Day School, with 120 students (grades 1-10), continues to receive invaluable pedagogical services from Midreshet Yerushalayim.

Midreshet Schechter – Israel

Midreshet Schechter offers continuing adult education programs in Hebrew, Russian, English and French to Israelis in Bet Midrash frameworks. Programs include study and cultural events at Masorti congregations and community centers, as well as at the Schechter Institute in Jerusalem. Over 700 people attended the weekly learning with hundreds more coming to one-time events.

Learning Centers Flourish

Rabbi Dubi Haiyun directs the study programs that take place primarily in Israel's north, including: Haifa's veteran Kehillat Moriah where its Midreshet HaKarmel offered 12 different courses at the synagogue and the Pisgat Ahuza Senior Center Facility; Karmiel's Kehillat Hakarmel offered three courses; two courses took place in the Lower Galilee town of Shlomi; interfaith study of Judaism and Islam at the Jezreel Valley College; a course in Nazareth Ilit for Russian speakers; Jewish Philosophy at Ramat Yishai's Kehillat Sukkat Shalom and Torah Portion study at Kibbutz Degania Bet. Most recently a new center opened in Yokne'am's Kehillat Ohel Moshe.

In Israel’s center, Rabbi Haiyun taught an inter-generational Bet Midrash in Or Akiva. A class on Jewish family life took place in Mazkeret Batya, with additional courses in Jerusalem in French and Russian at the Conservative Yeshiva and the Schocken Institute and in Ma’ale Adumim.

Rabbi Haiyun Police Interrogation Causes Media Splash

Midreshet Schechter Director, Rabbi Dubi Haiyun, Schechter graduate and Rabbi of Haifa’s Kehillat Moriah, was forcibly taken from his home in late summer and brought to police headquarters for questioning over his officiating at a marriage that the Haifa Chief Rabbinate had refused to perform. This outrageous act garnered international media interest and put Rabbi Haiyun at the center of the struggle for religious pluralism in Israel.

Continuing Adult Education in Hebrew and English

Midreshet Schechter’s English Jewish Studies Program, now entering its fourth year, continues to grow in popularity. Registration reached 150 participants for nine courses in 2017-18. In Spring 2018, an additional special six-week study series with walking tours in honor of Israel's 70th anniversary, showcased high level lecturers, including leading historian, Prof. Gil Troy. Also in the spring, a lecture series on Jewish Thought for Hebrew speakers was launched. The Hebrew program was expanded in Fall 2018 due to its success.
The Schechter Institutes enjoyed another year of fundraising success, raising $6,623,928 during the period of September 1, 2017- August 30, 2018. The continued growth enabled Schechter’s four non-profits to advance academic, educational and outreach activities and initiatives for 70,000 children and adults at its main campus in Jerusalem, at Neve Schechter in Tel Aviv, in TALI schools throughout the State of Israel, and at Schechter Centers in Northern Israel and in Ukraine. Our generous community of donors enables The Schechter Institutes to advance its mission of Jewish education and promoting religious pluralism and tolerance in Israel. We are grateful to each and every donor for their generosity and look forward to their continued support, partnership, and involvement in Schechter’s mission.

In addition to the generous support of our donor community, foundations, the Jewish Agency and local federations, the Israeli government has committed a record amount of $698,000 in support of our work in 2018, twice what Schechter received in 2016, including new and/or increased support for TALI, the Schechter Rabbinical Seminary and Midreshet Schechter. Donations from private Israeli sources in 2017-18, individuals and foundations/trusts, was $445,000. We will redouble efforts to raise money from both private and public sources in Israel. On December 13, an auction of contemporary Israeli art is planned to benefit Neve Schechter. All are invited to participate!

New Major Operating Gifts, Grants and Allocations ($20,000 and up)

Schechter Leadership News

Board News

We welcome Adir Waldman and Dr. Dana Peer to the Schechter Institute of Jewish Studies Board of Trustees and Executive Committee. Adir, an active friend of Neve Schechter, directs the Tel Aviv office of Freshfields, an international legal firm; Dana, chair and co-founder of the Ohel Menashe Kehilla in Yokne’am Ili, is a gerontological counselor. We also welcome back Amb. Colette Avital who has rejoined the SIS Board of Trustees. Joining the Audit Committee is Ira Brier, attorney, who currently resides in Herzlia. Stepping down: We wish to thank Diane Wohl and Lynne Galler for their wisdom, leadership and valuable contributions they made to the SIS Board and The Schechter Institutes, Inc. Board, respectively. Diane continues to serve on The Schechter Institutes, Inc. Board.

Senior Staff News

In 2017-18 Schechter involved the senior professional leadership of its non-profits in fundraising efforts. In addition to trips by The Schechter Institutes, Inc. President Prof. David Golinkin and Exec. Vice President Eitan Cooper, TALI CEO Dr. Eitan Chikli and SRS Dean Rabbi Avi Novis-Deutsch both travelled twice to meet with donors and friends and to speak to groups in the US and Canada.

Eitan Cooper and Dr. Peri Sinclair, TALI’s Director of Professional Development, attended the CEJP “Power of Judaism” Summit, September 5-6, 2018, and presented TALI’s new high school project to a gathering of Jewish philanthropists and foundations. TALI was one of four Israeli organizations selected for the Summit.

The newest member of our development team is Rabbi Paul Kerbel, Rabbinic Campaign Chair.
